

Middlebury College
Computer Science Seminar

Innovation Hub Information Session and Project Pitches

What do companies such as Facebook, Yahoo!, WordPress, Snapchat, DropBox, and Google all have in common? They were all founded on college campuses by students such as yourself! This year, the Innovation Hub and the Computer Science Department are hosting a joint venture, where students from the Middlebury College community, mainly Middlebury Entrepreneur and MiddCORE alumni, will pitch ideas to senior computer science students. CS students may choose to work with these projects as a part of their senior seminar portfolio.

If I am not a student in CS senior seminar, should I still come? YES! There may be opportunities for you to partner with a project that is not chosen by a senior student. Additionally, Alex Brockelman of the Innovation Hub will be there to highlight many of the other resources available to students of all classifications and majors. Are you interested in making something, such as art, jewelry, or food? Are you looking for a mentor or ways to meet a fellow student? Need funding for your company? Are you hoping to engage in social impact or looking for space to develop an idea? If so, come and learn more about the Innovation Hub!
